

Make a book cover!

In PEA'S BOOK OF HOLIDAYS, Pea's sister Tink gets fed up with Enid Blyton's book titles, and decides to invent her own.

Tinkerbelle lifted her head, just enough for Pea to see one brown eye glaring at her in disgust.

'Look, you haven't started this one yet – Five Have a Wonderful Time.'

'That's a stupid name for a book,' sulked Tinkerbelle, kicking it. 'I don't want to read about people having a wonderful time. I want to read Five Build an Explosive Device, or Five Set Fire to Stupid Pneumonia with Laser Beams from Their Eyes.'

So Pea suggests she writes her own.

'How do you spell decapitated?' asked Tinkerbelle.

'Why?'

Tinkerbelle thrust the notebook under Pea's nose.

Five Go on a Boat That Sinks
Five Get Lost in a Monster Jungle and
One of Them Gets Savagely Eaten by Lions
Four (Because One of Them Got Eaten)
Get Sent to Prison Even Though They Didn't Do It and Then Escape with Guns

'I thought I'd start with titles, and then write the insides of whichever one sounds best.'

What to do:

- 1) Fold a piece of paper in half so you have a book cover shape
 - 2) Choose a title: one of Tinkerbelle's, a real Enid Blyton title – or invent your own..
 - 3) Design your cover! Use the pictures above or other book covers for inspiration. You can draw your own art, or cut out pictures/words from old magazines.
- If you like, you can add a blurb to the back cover too.
